Connect with us today about becoming a NCHSE partner and give support to health science education programs across the nation – programs where students are guided to make impactful decisions about choosing healthcare as a career.

The National Health Science Conference affords opportunities for NCHSE to invite special partners such as publishers, resource providers, professional associations, workforce groups, and the healthcare industry to become sponsors of our annual national event. These exclusive partnerships are not only a great way to get involved with education; they are also an amazing form of marketing for you. Sponsorships allow branding in front of hundreds of educators at the conference and beyond, through social media, and on our website. Your investment can generate interest and new excitement for your work, your resources, and your industry need. With this type of exposure, everyone will remember that YOU partnered with NCHSE to support high quality health science education programs.

NCHSE is committed to doing our part to produce prepared postsecondary health science students as well as entry level workers.

Together, with our partners we create a system of support around teachers, engaging with them in learning environments and providing them with resources, strategies, and experiences that connect their classrooms and students to the healthcare industry.

Thanks for considering involvement at the 2023 National Health Science Conference.
